ORDER

Before the Court is Plaintiff's counsel's motion for attorney's fees under 42 U.S.C.

§ 406(b). See Dkt. No. 18. Defendant does not oppose the motion. See Dkt. No. 19.

Section 406(b)(1)(A) provides, in pertinent part, that "[w]henever a court renders a judgment favorable to a claimant . . . who was represented before the court by an attorney, the court may determine and allow as part of its judgment a reasonable fee for such representation, not in excess of 25 percent of the total of the past-due benefits to which the claimant is entitled by reason of such judgment[.]" 42 U.S.C. § 406(b)(1)(A). As the Supreme Court has explained,

"[m]ost plausibly read . . . § 406(b) does not displace contingent-fee arrangements as the primary reason by which fees are set for successfully representing Social Security benefits claimants in court." Gisbrecht v. Barnhart, 535 U.S. 789, 807 (2002). "Rather, § 406(b) calls for court review of such arrangements as an independent check, to assure that they yield reasonable results in particular cases." Id. (footnote omitted).

In this case, Plaintiff's counsel seeks $29,336.03, i.e., 25% of Plaintiff's past due benefits, in attorney's fees for 24.5 hours of federal district court work on Plaintiff's case. See Dkt. No. 18 at 4; Dkt. No. 18-2. Plaintiff's counsel asserts that this requested fee is reasonable because (1) he has 40 years' experience representing disabled claimants before the Social Security Administration; (2) there is nothing in the record that could support a claim that he was inefficient or lacked expertise; (3) he assumed representation of Plaintiff on July 10, 2020, taking over from previous legal counsel who had unsuccessfully represented Plaintiff; (4) he represented Plaintiff at the hearing, advised her to appeal to the Appeals Council, and brought successful legal action before this Court; and (5) after successfully obtaining a remand, he successfully obtained a fully favorable decision at the subsequent administrative hearing and as a result of his efforts, Plaintiff received a check for $66,996.70.¹ See Dkt. No. 18 at 3.

In Fields v. Kijakazi, 24 F.4th 845 (2d Cir. 2022), the Second Circuit noted that, in Wells v. Sullivan, 907 F.2d 367 (2d Cir. 1990), it had held that "'where there is a contingency fee agreement in a successful social security case, the district court's determination of a reasonable fee under § 406(b) must begin with the agreement, and the district court may reduce the amount called for by the contingency agreement only when it finds the amount to be unreasonable.'" Id.

at 852-53 (quoting [Wells, 907 F.2d] at 371). "In evaluating the reasonableness of the contingency agreement in a given case, Wells II instructed courts to 'determine whether the contingency percentage is within the 25% cap' and then to consider 'whether there has been fraud or overreaching in making the agreement, and' -- . . . 'whether the requested amount is so large as to be a windfall to the attorney.'" Id. at 853 (quoting [Wells, 907 F.2d] at 372).

Furthermore, in Gisbrecht, the Supreme Court explained that courts should "approach fee determinations by looking first to the contingent-fee agreement, then testing it for reasonableness," and provided examples of factors that a court might consider in conducting this analysis. Gisbrecht, 535 U.S. at 808. The Court noted that the factors that a court might consider when determining whether a reduction in the requested fees was warranted include (1) "the character of the representation and the results the representative achieved," i.e., whether the representation was substandard; (2) whether "the attorney is responsible for delay," which might result in the attorney "profit[ing] from the accumulation of benefits" during any delay that the attorney caused; and (3) whether "the benefits are large in comparison to the amount of time counsel spent on the case[.]" Id. In Fields, the Second Circuit noted that, although most of the factors that the Supreme Court articulated in Gisbrecht "are straightforward and readily applied," the last factor -- the so-called "windfall" factor -- is not as straightforward as it may seem.

Fields, 24 F.4th at 853.

In Fields, the Second Circuit clarified that "the windfall factor does not constitute a way of reintroducing the lodestar method and, in doing so, to indicate the limits of [this] factor." Id. at 854. Furthermore, the Court noted that, "[i]n determining whether there is a windfall that renders a § 406(b) fee in a particular case unreasonable, courts must consider more than the de facto hourly rate." Id. (citing Jester v. Astrue, 622 F.3d 371, 381 (5th Cir. 2010) ("[T]he lodestar calculation alone cannot constitute the basis for an 'unreasonable' finding. . . . [T]he district court must also articulate the factors that demonstrate to the court that the fee is unearned"). Thus, the Court stated that "even a relatively high hourly rate may be perfectly reasonable, and not a windfall, in the context of any given case." Id.

In determining whether the requested fee is a windfall, the Fields court explained that, "[a]mong the factors to be considered are the ability and expertise of the lawyers and whether they were particularly efficient, accomplishing in a relatively short amount of time what less specialized or less well-trained lawyers might take far longer to do." Id. Another factor that "courts should consider [is] the nature and length of the professional relationship with the claimant -- including any representation at the agency level[.]" Id. at 855. The court explained that, although "§ 406(b) fees compensate counsel for court-related work, consideration of 'the time spent and work performed by counsel on the case when it was pending at the agency level' can inform a district court's understanding of 'the overall complexity of the case, the lawyering skills necessary to handle it effectively, the risks involved, and the significance of the result achieved in district court.'" Id. (quoting Mudd v. Barnhart, 418 F.3d 424, 428 (4th Cir. 2005)). Additionally, another factor for the court "to consider is the satisfaction of the disabled claimant." Id. Finally, a fourth important factor for the court to consider is "how uncertain it was that the case would result in an award of benefits and the effort it took to achieve that result." Id. The Fields court noted that, "[i]n the absence of a fixed-fee agreement, payment for an attorney in a social security case is inevitably uncertain, and any reasonable fee award must take account of that risk." Id. at 855-56 (quoting Wells II, 907 F.2d at 371).

In this case, the fee agreement provides that "The Law Firm of PETER W. ANTONOWICZ will seek approval of 25% of all past due benefits due me and/or my dependents if I am awarded benefits." See Dkt. No. 18-3 at ¶ 3. There is nothing in the record to suggest that the fee requested is out of line with the character of the representation or the results that Plaintiff's counsel achieved, nor is there anything to suggest that he delayed or attempted to delay resolution of this litigation. Therefore, the Court must determine whether an award of the requested attorney's fees would amount to a windfall for Plaintiff's counsel.

In this case, there is no dispute that Plaintiff's counsel secured a favorable result for Plaintiff. He achieved remand to the administrative level, which ultimately resulted in an award of $117,344.10 in past-due benefits to Plaintiff. Furthermore, counsel's brief in support of Plaintiff's position contained appropriately researched arguments tailored to the facts of this case, which resulted in the parties stipulating to remand. See Dkt. Nos. 12, 13. In addition, as Plaintiff's counsel points out, he represented his first disability claimant in 1982 and has 40 years' experience representing disabled claimants before the Social Security Administration. See Dkt. No. 18 at 3. Having reviewed Plaintiff's counsel's itemization of the time he spent on this case, the Court finds that his experience representing Social Security claimants likely contributed to the efficiency with which he handled this case and that an inexperienced attorney would have required more time to complete the same amount and quality of work. "Thus, to reject a fee request because the resultant hourly rate is too high serves only to penalize efficiency, rather than rewarding it." Torres v. Colvin, No. 11 Civ. 5309 (JGK), 2014 WL 909765, *5 (S.D.N.Y. Mar. 6, 2014) (explaining that "[t]he more efficient the attorney, the fewer hours he will spend on a task, thus increasing the hourly rate if he invokes his contingency agreement"). Finally, considering the quality of Plaintiff's counsel's work and his efficiency, the Court finds that the de facto hourly rate of the fees requested in this case ($1,197) is not out of line with the corresponding hourly rate of attorney's fees that district courts in the Second Circuit have approved. See, e.g., Franklin P. v. Comm'r of Soc. Sec., 6:21-CV-162, 2022 WL 3371148 (N.D.N.Y. Aug. 16, 2022) (Hurd, J.) ($1,025.94 de facto hourly rate) Eric K. v. Berryhill, 5:15-cv-00845 (BKS), 2019 WL 1025791, *3 (N.D.N.Y. Mar. 4, 2019) (Sannes, J.) ($1,500 de facto hourly rate); Kazanjian v. Astrue, No. 09 civ. 3678 (BMC), 2011 WL 2847439, *2 (E.D.N.Y. July 15, 2011) ($2,100 de facto hourly rate).

Accordingly, for the above-stated reasons, the Court hereby ORDERS that Plaintiff's counsel's motion for attorney's fees under 42 U.S.C.

§ 406(b)(1), see Dkt. No. 18, is GRANTED in the amount of $29,336.03; and the Court further ORDERS that, upon receipt of the $29,336.03 in attorney's fees, Plaintiff's counsel is directed to refund to Plaintiff the EAJA fee award of $4,800.00.

IT IS SO ORDERED.
